An Arab Donkey Boy. Donkeys have always been indigenous to Egypt, and the donkey boys of Cairo and Alexandria are a race as unique as the car-drivers of Ireland. They guide nervous tourists through the narrow roadway of Suk or Muski at a furious pace, running alongside with shrieks of "Clear the way!"; but accidents seldom occur, and though they seem to thwack their beasts unmercifully, they feed and groom them well, and take much pains to decorate their harness gaily.

An Arab Donkey Boy. Donkeys have always been indigenous to Egypt, and the donkey boys of Cairo and Alexandria are quite as famous as the car-drivers of Ireland. The animals are nervous to start, though the narrow roadway is often blocked with a furious pace, running alongside with shouts of "Clear the way!"; but accidents seldom occur, and though they seem to thwack their beasts unmercifully, they feed and groom them well, and take much pains to decorate their harness gaily.
